11th Media Workshop at the Institute of Near and Middle Eastern Studies

After the Internet – Television Today: Twenty Years of Al Jazeera

29/ 30 June 2017

The foundation of the Arab-speaking satellite channel Al Jazeera in 1996 has changed the Arab mediascape tremendously. The celebration of its twentieth anniversary in November 2016 provides us the occasion to reflect on the social role of new media and communication technologies, and the dynamic interplay between technology and political agency.

Through the prism of recent literature on cultural diplomacy, soft power and the phenomenon of Al Jazeera, and a close analysis of selected video material about the celebrations of its anniversary in Doha, we will discuss the (im)possibilities of political participation from below in times of on-going technical innovations, massive transnational investments in the media market, and sophisticated cultural policies.
